

A man and a woman are in a bathtub filled with white soap suds. The man is leaning over the woman, who is lying back. Both are smiling and looking at each other. The man is holding a bar of soap in his right hand, which is raised above his head. The woman's head is tilted back, and she is laughing or smiling broadly. The background is a plain, light-colored wall.

To know a woman
is to know the fragrance she wants in a soap. And Naarden knows
fragrance best.
A bath soap to use
as he wants to.
When she wants to.
A bath soap with
the subtle fragrance
of deep, woody fern
or lofty lavender.
Isn't that what fragrance
is all about?

What fragrance is all about.
